

Zero-Step Entry

When you see this symbol, the home is “Zero-Step Entry”. Builders who have indicated their home as “Zero-Step Entry” have had the symbol above added to their pages. This does not imply that the home is designed to meet handicap accessibility requirements. The standards met to include the symbol above are as follows:

Zero-Step Entry:

- A minimum of one exterior entrance that is zero-step
- Since the service door from the garage to the house is the most used door, it is recommended that the door is zero-step and that it be 42” wide

Please Note: Due to unforeseen circumstances and/or weather, accessibility may be limited.
